"Education is a progressive discovery of your own ignorance", - said Will Durant, an U.S. historian. Most of philosophes all over the world write about education, because it is one of the most important things in our life.

And I think it is true. We study at school and always learn something new. We open a new world for ourselves. Some people may think they know everything, but in studying they understand that fact person can't know everything. Our world is a great place, so we can find something new every day. There are so many scientists, but our planet is so big, that is why it hasn't explored yet.

So, every people should study ~~to~~ not to be an ignorant person. We can find something new in every single thing on our planet, because the earth is incredible.
