Nowadays it become very popular to change something during the life. Most of people usually change either a career or a place of residence or both of it for several times.

In my opinion, it is good that people try to change something in their lives.

Firstly, when people change the career, they usually want to know something new or more interesting or sometimes they don't like the career they chose and they wanted to change it to live comfortably.

For example, my dad had worked as an engineer before he was 40. Now after he decided to change the career because it was too boring for him, and became a lawyer.

Secondly, some people change the place of residence for several times. I guess it is absolutely normal. These people usually want to see how people from other countries lives and to choose the country for living they like more.

For example, when I was in Canada, I met a man, who was from France. He told me that he changed his place of residence for 20 times. He lived in the countries which situated on different continents, but he couldn't find the place where he could feel himself comfortable. However, when he arrived to Canada he realized that for him it is the best country for living. And he has been living in Canada for 15 years.

So, in my opinion it is absolutely normal and even important for people to change something in their lives as it can help him to develop.
