Should students have a long summer holiday or should terms be longer?

The question of whether students should have long summer holidays or longer terms has been bothering everyone for some time. Obviously, there are some different opinions about that topic. I'm more likely to think that it is better not to have long summer holidays. Although students should have a chance to rest between terms.

To start with, I'll say which situation is better for learning. When students have long summer holidays, they forget almost everything they have learned. It is very difficult to start again the process of education, to have a timetable. Instead of long holidays in summer, students should have longer holidays between terms.

On holidays students can travel with their family abroad, visit their grandparents, or just relax after studying process. Because of short holidays between terms, the only opportunity to do that is in summer. That's another argument against having long summer holidays.

Finally, it's not enough for students to have only a week of rest after the longest term of the year, when teachers, by the way, can give you extra tasks to do in your free time.

All in all, the best decision in my opinion would be to have shorter summer holidays and longer holidays between terms. (214)
