would students have a long summer holiday or should terms be long?

I think that students should have a long summer holidays, than terms. During the school year pupils are work hard, they study different science lessons, try to do their huge homework. They also have various extra lessons. Many of them go to the art studios, dance schools, etc. So kids ~~have~~ don't have their free time, they just study. That is why it's important to have long summer holidays. Students should relax and enjoy their life. They can go for a walk or do something important for them.

It's more comfortable for some students to study at home. On their summer holidays they can learn something new in their free time. School's first ^{some} temp of learning new material can be too scary for children. They can forget information, so when they are in their comfortable atmosphere they can ^{improve} their memory skills, to learn this material again. Students can read different interests. huge books, they have free time to find useful information in the internet that can improve their vocabulary.

In conclusion, I would like to say that having long summer holidays is better for students. It is time for relaxing, having fun and visiting different interesting places. Student should have time exemp their studying, free time to do what they want.
