New Delhi is one of the biggest cities in India. It has big problems with some little visitors. Rhesus monkeys are pests in the city. They roam the streets and make noise. They break into shops and homes looking for food. Hungry monkeys even attack people and steal their lunches!

As the city grows, people move into the monkeys' territory to find living space. When the forests are cut down, the wild monkeys move into the city. There are now over five thousand monkeys living in New Delhi. Some people have tried using bigger monkeys called langurs. Langurs are enemies of the rhesus monkeys.

Shop owners use the langurs like guards. They put them on chains in front of buildings. The langurs scare off the smaller rhesus monkeys. However, this solution has problems. The rhesus monkeys do stay away from the shops with langurs. But they don't leave the city. They just move to another area and cause trouble in a new place.

For now, the city workers are trapping and keeping monkeys in cages. Officials try to move the monkeys to forests. But most of these places do not want extra monkeys! Even if they could move the monkeys out of the city, there is another problem. Wildlife experts say that the New Delhi monkeys have become used to life in the city. They may not be able to survive in the wild.

Put the information in the order it appears in the text.

11. 4)	a) People in New Delhi catch monkeys and send them out of the city.
12. 2)	b) More than 5,000 monkeys live in New Delhi.
13. 3)	c) Monkeys are dangerous.
14. 2) 1)	d) Rhesus monkeys live in the city because their forests disappear.
15. 3)	e) Some monkeys protect people.
