I agree that childhood is the happiest time of a person's life. I think so, because childhood is a magic time, when you feel yourself like in fairy tale. You get much love, attention, good and funny memories. It is time, when you have a lot of good friends. It is time when you can speak with all people and don't be afraid of it. It is time when you don't do your homework, when you can do what ~~do~~ you want, when you can watch a lot of cartoons, when you walk every day with your friends and family, when you and your parents don't think a lot about your marks.

Childhood is the happiest time of a person's life.

Text 1

Running Man

His friends call him Running Man. Thirty-three-year old Robert Garside has run through four continents – Australia, Asia, Europe and South America – on an incredible three-year journey. Now he wants to be the first person to run across all seven continents.

His journey has had problems. In Russia, someone tried to rob him. In China, police put him in prison for five days. In Pakistan, he was cheated upon and left with just his clothes and passport. When he called his girlfriend to tell her, she ended their relationships! In Australia, police stopped Robert when they found him running in 55-degree heat.

Robert travels lightly. He carries a Walkman with Pavarotti and Beethoven music, a letter from Nelson Mandela and a camera. He runs for eight hours each day, and he hopes that his journey, a total of 45, 000 miles, will take five years. His friends think he is crazy. He says, I just wanted to do something different. I am a very normal person.

Mark the sentences true (T) or false (F)

11. Robert Garside has run across seven continents. F

12. He split up with his girlfriend during his journey. F

13. He went to prison in Australia. F

TEXT 2

Read the article about a city in North America which was once called Nieuw Amsterdam. Arrange the questions in the way they are answered in the text.

There are two questions that you do not need.

- a) How large and successful is the city today? —
- b) When did people from Europe first arrive and start living on the island that became Nieuw Amsterdam?
- c) What were the names of the people who lived in the city of Nieuw Amsterdam? —
- 3 d) How did the first Europeans in Nieuw Amsterdam build their city?
- 2 e) Who lived on the island before the Europeans arrived?
- 4 f) When and why did Nieuw Amsterdam become an English city?

In 1625, settlers from Holland arrived on the southern coast of a long, narrow island off the east coast of North America. It was a beautiful island with thick forests full of wild animals, and deep rivers full of fish. There was a waterfall in the centre of the island, and in the north the settlers found a mountain with steep cliffs. There were long beaches with sand dunes along the coasts, and a deep harbour in the south where it was safe for their ships. It was the perfect place to build a new town. The men from Holland weren't the first people on the island. Native Americans lived in a forest near the mountain in the north, and they called their island Manna-hata, which meant 'island of many hills'. They were happy to see the unusual new visitors and didn't attack them. They wanted to meet them and buy things from them. The leader of the Dutch expedition met the Native Americans, and they agreed to sell the deserted south of the island to him. It wasn't expensive. It cost sixty Dutch guilders, which is only about twenty euros now.

The settlers built a fort to protect the harbour. Then they started to build homes and shops. They constructed tall, narrow wooden houses in the Dutch style.

Next, they built churches, a theatre and government buildings. There were only about 300 people in the new town, but they all worked together and the town grew very quickly. In 1638, they built their first school, and a teacher came all the way from Holland to teach the children. The settlers designed very straight streets. The street that went through the centre of their city was very wide, so they called it Breede Weg, which means 'Broad way' in Dutch. And, in the northern part of their town, they built a wall that was three metres high, and they called the street next to it Wall Street. The town was very small, but it was clean, tidy and well-built. And the people who lived there loved it. They called the new city Nieuw Amsterdam. Then everything changed. There was a war between Holland and England, and Holland lost. In 1664, four English ships sailed into the harbour of Nieuw Amsterdam, and the town became an English city. Life in the small wooden town didn't change completely. The government changed and the English settlers began to build houses in the English style, but Dutch continued to live there. However, there was one thing that the English didn't like about the city - its name. They decided to change it. They decided to call the city New York.
