Nowadays the question of home education became very popular. There are different points of view about it. Some people think that children need to go to school, and others sure that it is better for young generation to learn at home. I personally agree with the first opinion.

To begin with, a parent can't give a child such deep and systematized knowledges in various sciences, as school teachers. Each teacher had been learning his subject for many years and obviously is a master at it. And a parent knows only one subject, connected with his or her job, and basics of others. Also ^{parent's} love and kindness can do bad influence on studying process. Moreover, when a child goes to school he has a wonderful opportunity to communicate with other children and make friends, while at home he can talk only to his family.

Anyway, some people think, that school society can harm their child and its education has a lot of disadvantages. Though, I can't agree with them, because only at school a child learn to live and work in the society and it may cause problems in his future if he wouldn't collide with other people at school.

To sum up, home education is ^{an} interesting variant of education, which can help some children, but I'm sure that if you can go to school, it is better to use this option.
